This class provides a variety of experiences to stimulate a child's natural ability to learn and explore the world around them. The teachers do many activities geared toward the children's sensory development. These activities include such things as: blowing bubbles, listening to music, and playing in water. As the year progresses and the children grow and develop more activities are introduced. In warm weather the teacher's and the children enjoy going for walks and enjoying nature. The unique thing about this room is that the teacher's get to experience all of the babies many changes throughout the year, from infancy to sitting up, crawling, and then walking.
